ABOUT TINA GLASNECK

Tina Glasneck is a USA Today, Amazon, Apple, Barnes & Noble and International bestselling author. Published since 2012, Tina has made monumental achievements in her career.

Tina loves creating tales filled with magic and mayhem. Her unique voice and passion fuel her story-telling. Often inspired by mythology, history, she enjoys bringing the humanities to life, especially that of the different pantheons, which she does in her bestselling fantasy, urban fantasy, and paranormal romance novels.

Readers have mostly compared her work to great action flicks mashed up with mythology, be it the awesome adventures of Resident Evil meets Thor with the strong kick-butt female characters, strong world-building, and excitement in exciting new worlds.

Tina eats and breaths research, diving in, often time as close to the source material as possible. As a graduate of Oral Roberts and Liberty University, Tina combines her love of mythology and history to create fantastical tales of the gods. Her first fantasy was published in 2016.

Before writing fantasy, Tina cut her teeth writing dark crime fiction that pulsates with the truths of the underbelly of crime. A former post-conviction and criminal paralegal, she uses her real-life knowledge and experience to create diabolical tales of murder and mayhem.

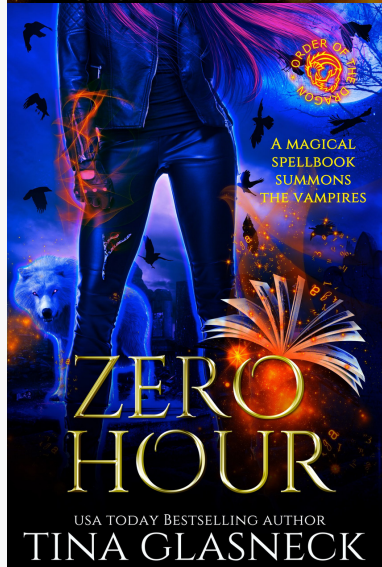

Tina is known for creating a world of fantasy, and heart-pounding crime fiction, where all of her stories are connected in her story tree.

Tina is often in appearance at conferences across the country but enjoys spending time with her family, communing with nature, and creating artwork to inspire her muse.

WRITERS ON THE MOON

In 2021, Tina was accepted into the Writers on the Moon project, led by Dr. Susan K. Quinn. Her books will join the Astrobotic's Peregrine Mission 1. the payload will be delivered to Lacus Mortis, on the Moon, for future anthropologists and generations. The digital payload will be uploaded onto a SanDisk Extreme microSD card and sent to the Moon for posterity.

Astrobotic, a space logistics company and an official partner of NASA, will deliver the Writers On The Moon payload.

This mission is the first commercial launch, which includes payloads from NASA, DLR –German Aerospace Center, Bosch, and even Dogecoin. The launch is slated for 2022.

Glasneck, an author of more than twenty titles, is sending her catalog of Norse mythology-inspired fantasy novels to the Moon as a beacon of hope. "Future space travelers will discover the lunar time capsule and learn about our culture and world through the items we've left behind," says Glasneck, "just like we've learned about the Norse, Egyptian and Greek cultures before us."

Glasneck, who also writes about Norse gods like Loki and Thor, is always looking for a chance to bring history and myth to life. She says that since she has so much joy in doing so, even more opportunities continually arise. "I like to think that the Norse gods are giving me a boon as I help to share their myths."

Her fantasy books, specifically the Hell Chronicles, follow the Norse gods after their arrival to Earth. "I like to call the series 'Buffy' meets 'American Gods'. It's what happens when the Earth needs a hero and the only one available is a feisty heroine willing to risk it all for humanity."

"The Norse myths continue to teach me something new every day," she continues. "My favorite deity is Loki, as he's an agent of change. I find that the myths show that we can continue to push forward."

I will always be happy that when I needed them most, my characters showed up and fought this good fight with me.

In a world where being a d*ck makes you famous, be kind.

Be kind. You don't know the invisible battle someone might be fighting.

"The gift of writing is a superpower. Stories can change minds and hearts. Through words, writers give hope to the hopeless and allow readers to experience a myriad of emotions."

With Norse mythology, you have this play of light and darkness, of chaos and order. There's this sense we need both for balance, and in that balance are the gifts of the gods."

"We can shoot for the moon and indeed land on it."

"People often discount shadow work. I know my shadows' names, those things that seek to subjugate me, inflict their pain on my soul, and what has caused me to ask them to stay, walking with me. We have to be brave enough to look inside... and dig deeper to ask why."

"Whenever in doubt as to the origins of something, just realize that Loki is probably involved!"

There is so much freedom in stepping into your spot, that one carved out just for you. There is no push or pull, just electricity that resonates in your bones. It is recognizing that everything is possible and you are finally FREE to shine in the night sky.

Poetry unlocks the heart and when we bleed on the page we can discover so much that we never could put into words.

If you catch me dancing in the moonlight, drunk on Sangria, just know I am living my best life.

Out of all the women throughout the worlds and realms, when he could have anyone, Loki chose me.

Remember, everything needs time -- diamonds, pearls, good cake.
